

David is a mental health professional with a Master of Science in Clinical Mental Health Counseling from McDaniel College. Before entering the mental health field, David earned his Master's of Fine Art from Stony Brook University in New York and a Bachelor's of Fine Arts from The School of the Art Institute of Chicago. For many years, David worked as an arts administrator, board member, advocate, and connector, helping to advance opportunities for greater inclusion. He also taught film history, drawing, figure sculpting, and glassblowing at four colleges and universities. In addition to being a counselor, David is a husband, father, musician, and artist. What ties his time in the arts to his practice of therapy is a love of nurturing relationships and working collaboratively toward creative problem-solving.
